

Salatiso Mdeni <salatiso.mdeni@gmail.com>

Bringing sick people to see Lukhanyo

6 messages

Mpho Mkosana <mphosuperstar@gmail.com>
To: Salatiso Mdeni <salatiso.mdeni@gmail.com>

Wed, Jul 25, 2018 at 3:49 PM

Hi

Salatiso I had requested nicely that your family not come see Lukhanyo if they are ill yet still your nephew comes to see Lukhanyo and kisses him when he's got a stomach upset/bug.

Please consider Lukhanyo's well being when you and your family put his health in jeopardy when he's still so young.

Mpho

Salatiso Mdeni <salatiso.mdeni@gmail.com>
To: Mpho Mkosana <mphosuperstar@gmail.com>

Wed, Jul 25, 2018 at 6:24 PM

Good Day

I know logic and education are not your competencies but from now on it will serve you well to ensure you've got sound bases before you make unfounded accusations. A logical and educated person would know that the risk of infection from any condition or disease depends on how it is transmitted, a painful stomach is not airborne and neither is it transmitted by contact. I knew this before I turned 20 because I actually studied microbiology and epidemiology successfully as part of my first qualification, not that I'd expect you understand.

Just so you know the last time you took my son for vaccination they actually infected him with the condition they were immunising him against so that he could build resilience, so even if in the worst scenario my nephew's condition was airborne at recovery to healing phase the concentrations are so low that they do Buggs more good than bad as he would be stimulated to build his immunity against such conditions. Unless you are telling me that in your house and the places you take my son to no one has any condition nor gets sick, other than malice or stupidly there's no explanation for your accusations.

Just so you know last weekend u Solo had a sleepover with his friend as reward for his excellent school performance last term, two eight year olds partied and got carried away with what they consumed and these are the consequences. I would expect the adult who brought u Solo to see my son to have assessed the situation, she does after all cares for him and your son's father both of whom are healthy and successful in their own rights. So much so in fact that you saw it fitting to have her grandson because you knew he'd at least have a chance at such because at least half of his genes are living proof.

In future think your statements through, I'd say consult with your people but after the recent encounter with your legal team you're no better off. Fortunately though I've got that covered too because I actually planned for my son, so as before if ever you have medical concerns relating to my son's health but don't feel like asking his father u Siyabonga who is a competent professional in his field ukhona. At least you still have u Phakama whom I've approved of on the basis of her sound reasoning, logic, success etc

Regards,
Salatiso

[Quoted text hidden]

Mpho Mkosana <mphosuperstar@gmail.com>
To: Salatiso Mdeni <salatiso.mdeni@gmail.com>

Wed, Jul 25, 2018 at 6:45 PM

Ahhhh back to insults I see.

But I will repeat for you, educated person, whose not getting what I'm saying. While Lukhanyo is under 6 months and is limited on medication he can take please do not bring sick people to visit him. I don't care what you say, but when his Paed says keep him away from sickly people for first 6mnths that trumps your 3/6month course in whatever ology you studied.

Thanks

[Quoted text hidden]

Salatiso Mdeni <salatiso.mdeni@gmail.com>
To: Mpho Mkosana <mphosuperstar@gmail.com>

Wed, Jul 25, 2018 at 7:15 PM

You keep on referring to insults yet every statement I've written be it to your or your representatives has been factual and can be verified. Unless off course I'm now in a different reality where you didn't drop out of school and now stuck in a job you hate while living a stagnant life if not regressive.

Ukhumbule uzele ngoku, ungumzekelo whether you like it or not. The day my son drops out of school despite having the means and goes on to have a child he is not prepared for it's all on you, it'll serve you well to start projecting the example you want your child to grow up to be. I do and have the means and resources to find an alternative should he so choose.

Get your facts right before you make allegations, it is with great restraint that I am as patient as I am for you to learn that.

Regards,
Salatiso

[Quoted text hidden]

Mpho Mkosana <mphosuperstar@gmail.com>
To: Salatiso Mdeni <salatiso.mdeni@gmail.com>

Wed, Jul 25, 2018 at 7:22 PM

Oh please you're so full of it

[Quoted text hidden]

Salatiso Mdeni <salatiso.mdeni@gmail.com>
To: Mpho Mkosana <mphosuperstar@gmail.com>

Wed, Jul 25, 2018 at 7:37 PM

And I can back it up;

- I'm a solid provider for my family,
- Exemplary father to my son who'll stop at nothing to ensure his well being whether I'm dead or alive, twice over,
- Well respected in my career so much so I have a reoccurring slot on a national professional publication,
- I also put bread on the table, last month more than 100k landed on my account and next week another 200k both of which don't form part of my more than million rand annual salary. And all this goes towards that boy, if I top over today you're raising a millionaire.
- I don't only buy the bread, I can make it and clean up afterwards.

So yes, I am full of it but only because I can back it up. No parent should bring a child to this world if they can't at least provide a comparable lifestyle to what their parents did, I can do that 10 times over for my son. So that's why I'm full of it, because I know my son will grow to live a life that my parents wish to they could have provided for me, because I am logical, I'm pragmatic, I'm educated, I have a forward view backed by actions today that ensure my plans materialise for the benefit of my son and my family.

Regards,
Salatiso

[Quoted text hidden]